Usenet is the original network for sharing information, making Fubbie compatible with Usenet. Fubbie is a software tool that makes Usenet available to any user without having to learn how to use it. It can be installed easily as it is a stand alone program. Fubbie can be installed as an asynchronous, pipelined, clustered NNTP server, an ASFM client, a Web-based newsreader and a real-time newsreader. The Fubbie work server can be used to help host on-line newsgroups, for example political or pornographic newsgroups. To start a newsgroup the user needs to register a domain name, or an IP address at least. Other usenet server features include clustering, ASN filtering, and announce submission. There is also a program called fubbie-bunnie that enables the use of a free DNS server for serving newsgroups, using a BIND DNS server. Wikipedia Category: P2P Software New site-specific newsgroups are not currently supported by Fubbie. A BIND9 based fubbie-bunnie solution is available if you want to host one or more usenet newsgroups. You can get Fubbie bunnie from their site. If you look at the certificate in a trusted browser window and request fubbie-bunnie.site the certificate will not be trusted by your browser. This is because your browser usually offers to trust only certificates signed by certificates which it trusts. If the trust settings are left to the default settings the certificate will not be trusted. If this is a problem it is easy to solve by adding fubbie-bunnie.site to the trusted list in the list of trusted certificate sites in your browser.
